BOY, LOST EIGHT DAYS IN MAINE WOODS, RESCUED

Donn Fendler's Training As Scout Helps Him Defeat Dangers of Wilds

PARENTS EXPRESS JOY

Camp Operator Finds Youth Exhausted, Sobbing On Edge Of River

SHERMAN, Me., July 26—"Oh, mummy, mummy, I'm so glad to see you."

Courageous Donn Fendler, 12, Rye, N. Y., Boy Scout, today buried his head on the shoulder of his mother, reunited once more after eight terrifying days, lost in the fastness of the Maine woods.

The happy mother, Mrs. Donald Fendler, came from Bangor with Mrs. Charles Mangan, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y. They stayed at Staceyville overnight. Her husband, a New York clothing merchant, is confined to a Bangor hospital with an eye injury suffered during the week-long search for Donn.

"It seems like a miracle, a dream come true," said the overjoyed father after he talked by telephone with his rescued son.

Greatly strengthened by warm food and a night's rest in bed under heavy blankets after subsiding on berries and stagnant water on lofty Mt. Katahdin, and sleeping under the Donn Fendler stars in a bur-lap bag at night, the boy was up early at the camp of Nelson McMoarn, 62, his rescuer, when his mother arrived.

Sixty Miles Covered

He recounted again between sobs of joy from his mother his frightful experience, how he became lost from a hiking party, how he fell on the rocks and into a hole, how he lost his clothes, how he was frightened by two bears, how he followed streams and finally a woodsman's telephone line seeking habitation, until he fell exhausted at the Penobscot river on the other side of which McMoarn heard his feeble moans. He had wandered fully sixty miles.

After eight days and seven nights in the wilderness, Young Donn found the sound of human voices such a delight that he talked an endless stream. His joy at companionship again was un-

TOOLS REPORTED STOLEN IN CITY FOUND ON YEGGS

A quantity of carpenter tools, reported stolen from a parked car in Circleville during the latter part of May or early in June, was received Wednesday by the Pickaway county sheriff's department from the West Virginia state patrol.

The tools, the Pickaway county department was informed, were found in the possession of Thomas Nelson and Bill White, escaped convicts from the state penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va., who are reported to have lived in the Circleville district about six months.

The West Virginia state patrol said the men had been returned to the penitentiary to serve four years on five year sentences imposed on them in 1937 for breaking and entering.

The tools include wood bits, chisels, a drill, pliers, tape and files.

The department has no report of the tools having been stolen.

ELECTRIC FAN LEAPS ON BURCH, HURTS HIS HEAD

George Burch, E. Main street, was nursing cuts and bruises on the head Wednesday after he was "attacked" by an electric fan.

The accident happened when Burch was hooking up the fan. He had it placed on a shelf. When he stooped to plug in the electric wires the fan fell from the shelf landing on his head. Burch was treated for two cuts on the head.

HUEY WOULD HAVE PREVENTED FRAUD, GOV. LONG CLAIMS

BATON ROUGE, La., July 26—"If Huey Long were still alive this scandal never would have happened."

This was the declaration of Governor Earl H. Long, brother of the famous Huey, as he sat in the executive mansion today and discussed the great Louisiana political graft scandal which is rocking the state.

The newest sensation in the graft expose is the indictment of L. P. Abernathy, who only recently resigned as chairman of the Louisiana State Highway commission. Abernathy is accused of using his position to secure business for a corporation in which he was a stockholder.

Indictments were returned by the East Baton Rouge grand jury against Abernathy, A. K. Kilpatrick, office manager of the Standard Office Supply company, of Monroe, La., and Dr. James Smith, resigned president of the Louisiana State university who previously was indicted on forgery and embezzlement charges.

It is alleged that Abernathy, while a member of the board of supervisors of L. S. U., gave contracts to the standard office supply company, a corporation in which he was a principal stockholder.

According to the indictments the contracts were given out by Abernathy over a three year period starting in 1936 and involved approximately $40,000. Huey Long died in 1935.

Nearly all the acts of graft being charged in connection with various deals were made after 1935.

Governor Long, in talking with an International News Service reporter, said graft such as is now being charged against various state officials could not exist if his brother Huey were still running the state Democratic organization. The governor said the graft scandal (Continued on Page Two)

Francis Death Causing Probe in Ross County

CHILLICOTHE, July 26—Chillicothe police and the highway patrol have joined forces in the search for an old model car believed to have struck and fatally injured Chauncey Francis, 39, of Laurelville Route 2, last Thursday.

Francis was found along Route 23, north of Chillicothe, in a dazed condition. After receiving treatment he was taken to his home. He was later returned to Chillicothe hospital and died at 9:30 p. m. Friday.

There was some belief among acquaintances and relatives of Francis that he might have been the victim of foul play. Police, who made the original investigation, hold to the opinion Francis was struck by a hit-skip motorist. A bread truck driver had reported passing an old car shortly after he observed Francis walking in the highway.

Police were told that Nevin Hedding, of Laurelville Route 2, left Francis out of his car just north of Chillicothe, and Francis apparently started to walk northward on the highway.

The tools, the Pickaway county department was informed, were found in the possession of Thomas Nelson and Bill White, escaped convicts from the state penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va., who are reported to have lived in the Circleville district about six months.

The West Virginia state patrol said the men had been returned to the penitentiary to serve four years on five year sentences imposed on them in 1937 for breaking and entering.

JAP SPOKESMAN SAYS 9-POWER TREATY AT END

Tokyo's Ships Block River Leading To Canton; Brit Trade Endangered

TIENTSIN CRISIS RECALLED

Rigid Embargo On John Bull Goods Ordered; Numerous Troops Moving

TOKYO, July 26 — The nine-power pact guaranteeing the United States, among others, an "open door" to Chinese trade, is "about to die," a Japanese foreign office spokesman flatly announced today.

The assertion was made in answer to a question relative to the effect on the treaty of the Anglo-Japanese accord wherein Britain recognized Japan's "special requirements" in its military penetration in China.

Bluntly the spokesman said: "The nine-power treaty is moribund."

HONGKONG, July 26—Japanese warships today blockaded the Canton river cutting off the port of Canton from all trade and seriously interfering with shipping destined for the British crown colony at Hongkong.

U. S., France Suffer

Aimed specifically at Britain, the blockade also affected American and French interests. The Japanese government officially announced also that the English and French concessions on Shamen island, at Canton, would be isolated.

An American warship was speeding to Canton in an attempt to reach that port before the blockade actually was completed.

Official Japanese notification to foreign governments stated sentries would be placed at bridge entrances to Shamen and all persons entering or leaving would be submitted to search.

This action paralleled the Japanese move in Tientsin, where a blockade has been in effect since June 14, and where incidents have occurred precipitating a critical state of relations between Britain and Japan.

The Japanese Canton river blockade was the first overt action of the Tokyo government following British formal recognition of Japanese "military needs" in China.

MADGE EVANS OF FILMS, PLAYWRIGHT-AUTHOR WED

OGUNQUIT, Me., July 26—Aft-ernath of a whirlwind midnight marriage, Madge Evans, blonde film and stage star, and Sidney Kingsley, playwright and author, were on their honeymoon today.

Action in the wedding story was so rapid the bridegroom had to borrow a ring from his best man, Damian O'Flynn, actor, and the bride, attended by Mrs. O'Flynn as bridesmaid, wore the pretty dress as per her appearance in the last act of "Brief Moment" at Ogunquit playhouse.

Scene of the nuptials was the home of Trial Justice Lester M. Bragdon, who waived the five day law and performed the ceremony. A dozen actors and actresses playing at the Summer theatre attended the wedding.

H. HAYS' NAME GOES TO SENATE

F. D. Nominates Incumbent To Continue On Job As Postmaster

President Roosevelt sent to the senate Wednesday the nomination of A. Hulse Hays, N. Court street, for reappointment as Circleville's postmaster.

Mr. Hays was appointed acting postmaster and took charge of the Circleville office on Nov. 1, 1933. He was commissioned a postmaster on June 30, 1934 to serve a four-year term. Although his term expired last year he continued to serve as postmaster as appointments were delayed due to changes in laws.

Under new regulations the re-appointment to the position will be without term, or for life.

SEVEN FEDERAL PRISONERS BEAT BUS MAN, ESCAPE

WASHINGTON, July 26—Seven federal prisoners today escaped from a prison bus after assaulting the driver while being transported from Atlanta to Lewisburg, Pa., penitentiary.

Advices received by the justice department, said the escape was made at Thornburg, Va. Fifteen other prisoners aboard the bus made no attempt to join their companions.

Those who escaped are: Raymond Walker, Columbus, Ohio, serving 3½ years for auto theft.

Charles F. Cole, Chattanooga, Tenn., serving three years for transportation of a stolen automobile.

Gerald Montague, Paducah, Ky., serving three years for auto theft.

Luther Morris, Paducah, Ky., serving five years for post office robbery.

John Gibson, Big Stone Gap, W. Va., serving four years for counterfeiting coins.

Hugh Penny, Big Stone Gap, W. Va., serving four years for robbery of a railroad box car.

Walter Smith, Cincinnati, serving three years for breaking into a post office.

The seven prisoners attacked the driver of the bus with their fists, beating him severely and forcing the vehicle off the road. The convicts then stopped a passing automobile and fled.

Virginia state police under Supt. H. B. Nichols immediately mobilized a statewide hunt.

Arabs Free Ohio Pastor Without Pay

Rev. Gerould Goldner Back With Father After Abduction

JERUSALEM, July 26 — Released by Arab abductors without payment of demanded $2,500 ransom, the Rev. Gerould Goldner, 29-year-old Cleveland missionary, was safe in the company of his pastor-father today recuperating from his nerve wracking experiences.

The young minister arrived late last night to be greeted by his careworn father, the Rev. Jacob Goldner, also of Cleveland. Dr. Goldner had never expected to see his son alive.

Alone, riding a jogging donkey, the missionary was met on the highway leading to Jerusalem from the Moab hills where he had been kept prisoner by Bedouin kidnapers, by British District Commissioner Edward Keith-Ross, who was driving an automobile.

Keith-Ross stopped his car. He had not previously met Goldner. The commissioner said, quietly: "Mr. Goldner, I presume."

The American smiled, nodded. He was taken to his father in the Englishman's car.

A small reward was given Arab go-betweens who negotiated the release.

FAYETTE COUNTY FAIR ATTRACTS LARGE THROGS

WASHINGTON, C. H., July 26 —With good weather conditions, the Fayette county fair is headed for new attendance records. The big days of the fair are Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Tuesday was devoted largely to the preparation of exhibits. "We are so crowded for space we don't know what to do," was the manner in which Secretary George L. Gosard sized up the event. Department were enlarged to take care of the influx of exhibitors.

Racing opened Wednesday afternoon to continue Thursday and Friday. The first horse show will be held Wednesday night. Another horse show will be held Thursday night.

Some Pickaway county horses will be entered in the shows Wednesday and Thursday night.

DAYTON AUTOIST HURT SERIOUSLY NEAR N. HOLLAND

Lewis J. Schlosser, of 434 N. Main street, Dayton, was seriously injured Wednesday when his car left Route 22, west of New Holland, went into a ditch, returned to the highway, turned over several times and finally landed on its wheels 300 feet from the point where it left the highway.

Schlosser suffered a fractured skull, his right ear was torn off and a deep gash cut on his chest. It was doubted if he would survive the injuries. He was taken to Miami Valley hospital, at Dayton.

While an ambulance was removing Schlosser to the hospital, a Dayton police cruiser, escorting the ambulance, skidded on a street car track and struck a parked car. No one was hurt.

BOMB AT LONDON STATION INJURES TWELVE PERSONS

LONDON, July 26—Twelve persons were injured, one seriously, by two bomb explosions in the King's Cross railway station in the heart of London today.

The injured included two women whose clothing was torn off by the force of the blasts. The bombs had been planted in the station cloakroom.

Reports immediately connected the blasts with activities of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. In an address to the House of Commons on Monday, Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare charged that the terrorists, "stimulated by foreign organizations" planned a campaign of outrages that included the blowing up of the houses of Parliament.

Reiley To Send Deputies To Return Women To Reformatory

MARYSVILLE, July 26 — A bread and water diet for at least three days and solitary confinement for 30 days or more, with all hope of special privileges or an eventual parole gone, was the prospect awaiting Hammer Slayer Velma West when she is returned from Dallas, Tex., to Marysville reformatory.

Superintendent Marguerite Reiley, who before the escape believed she had reconstructed the murderess and who rewarded Velma with the privileges of a trusty, will determine her punishment.

DALLAS, Tex., July 26 — Velma West and Mary Ellen Richards, captured in Dallas following their escape from a state reformatory in Ohio, today stated that they would waive extradition to Ohio to resume their interrupted imprisonment.

DALLAS, Tex., July 26—"One little adventure in this dull life of mine" was at an end today for Velma West, 32-year-old hammer murderess who escaped June 19 from the Marysville, O., women's reformatory.

A police hunt that had stretched into every corner of the nation came to an end when three Dallas detectives walked up to the woman and one of her fugitive companions, Mary Ellen Richards, 24, of Cincinnati, in the Dallas market district last night.

Two other women who joined Mrs. West and Miss Richards in the jail break have not been found. Mrs. West, who readily admitted her identity, said the group had split up after the break. Florence Shelton, 23, of Gallipolis, left them while they were hitch-hiking to Dallas and Virginia Brawdy, 19, of Akron, left them after arrival in the Texas city, she said.

When she escaped, Mrs. West left behind a note saying: "Must have one little adventure in this dull life of mine. If this should in any way cause you trouble, I shall come back immediately."

Tip Brings Arrest

But it was only because of a routine "tip" that the Dallas authorities were able to recapture her. The homicide squad was checking the possibility today that Miss Brawdy might still be in the city's underworld.

Eleven years of a life sentence—more than a year of it in solitary confinement, she told officers—had worn the nerves of the woman who was found guilty of (Continued on Page Two)

STRIKER NABBED FOR SCRATCHING WORKERS' CARS

CLEVELAND, July 26—A striker was arrested today at the Fisher body plant of General Motors where a strike of C.I.O.-United Automobile Workers is in progress.

Police said the man, Robert Stewart, 27, was scratching the bodies of non-strikers' automobiles. Stewart was released on a waiver. There was no general disorder, although mounted police on one occasion broke a way through the picket lines for non-strikers' cars.

One woman worker fled to cover when part of her clothing was torn off by a woman strike sympathizer.

Company officials said 612 were at work in the plant today, but this figure was disputed by the union. The strike was called in support of a demand for a supplemental agreement for skilled workers.

TEACHING STAFF FILLED IN CITY
Two new teachers were employed Tuesday evening by the Circleville board of education to fill grade school vacancies. They were Miss Alice Barton, of Adelphi, and Miss Ruth Eccard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Eccard, who resides on the Island road.

Miss Barton has had her college work at Wilmington college, Ohio university and Ohio State university. She has attended Ohio State university the last three Summers and has had 10 years of experience in the primary grades, eight of which were in Salt Creek township school, Pickaway county, and the last two at Centralia school, Ross county, where she had been reemployed for the next term.

Miss Eccard is a graduate of Capital university. She has had one year's experience at Stoughton, where she taught the first and second grades.

The employment of the two teachers completes the teaching staff for Circleville schools.

The board voted to repair old blinds and install some new ones in the Franklin and Walnut buildings. Griffith and Martin will do the work.

Playground apparatus at the four elementary playgrounds will be repaired and painted this Summer. The work will be done by John Stevenson.

Bids were received for redecorating the high school auditorium. No action was taken. Cement

Arabs Free Ohio Pastor Without Pay

Rev. Gerould Goldner Back With Father After Abduction

JERUSALEM, July 26 — Released by Arab abductors without payment of demanded $2,500 ransom, the Rev. Gerould Goldner, 29-year-old Cleveland missionary, was safe in the company of his pastor-father today recuperating from his nerve wracking experiences.

The young minister arrived late last night to be greeted by his careworn father, the Rev. Jacob Goldner, also of Cleveland. Dr. Goldner had never expected to see his son alive.

Alone, riding a joggling donkey, the missionary was met on the highway leading to Jerusalem from the Moab hills where he had been kept prisoner by Bedouin kidnapers, by British District Commissioner Edward Keith-Ross, who was driving an automobile.

Keith-Ross stopped his car. He had not previously met Goldner. The commissioner said, quietly: "Mr. Goldner, I presume."

The American smiled, nodded. He was taken to his father in the Englishman's car.

A small reward was given Arab go-betweens who negotiated the release.

FAYETTE COUNTY FAIR ATTRACTS LARGE THROGS

WASHINGTON, C. H., July 26 — With good weather conditions, the Fayette county fair is headed for new attendance records. The big days of the fair are Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Tuesday was devoted largely to the preparation of exhibits. "We are so crowded for space we don't know what to do," was the manner in which Secretary George L. Gosard sized up the event. Departments were enlarged to take care of the influx of exhibits.

Racing opened Wednesday afternoon to continue Thursday and Friday. The first horse show will be held Wednesday night. Another horse show will be held Thursday night.

Some Pickaway county horses will be entered in the shows Wednesday and Thursday night.

DAYTON AUTOIST HURT SERIOUSLY NEAR N. HOLLAND

Lewis J. Schlosser, of 434 N. Main street, Dayton, was seriously injured Wednesday when his car left Route 22, west of New Holland, went into a ditch, returned to the highway, turned over several times and finally landed on its wheels 300 feet from the point where it left the highway.

Schlosser suffered a fractured skull, his right ear was torn off and a deep gash cut on his chest. It was doubted if he would survive the injuries. He was taken to Miami Valley hospital, at Dayton.

While an ambulance was removing Schlosser to the hospital, a Dayton police cruiser, escorting the ambulance, skidded on a street car track and struck a parked car. No one was hurt.

BOMB AT LONDON STATION INJURES TWELVE PERSONS

LONDON, July 26—Twelve persons were injured, one seriously, by two bomb explosions in the King's Cross railway station in the heart of London today.

The injured included two women whose clothing was torn off by the force of the blasts. The bombs had been planted in the station cloakroom.

Reports immediately connected the blasts with activities of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. In an address to the House of Commons on Monday, Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare charged that the terrorists, "stimulated by foreign organizations" planned a campaign of outrages that included the blowing up of the houses of Parliament.

MART UNABLE TO HOLD EARLY MORNING GAINS

NEW YORK, July 26 — The stock market today again failed to hold an early advance, as profit-taking converted gains running to more than a point into fair-sized declines before noon.

Trading was at a slow pace with first hour sales limited to 220,000 shares.

Reiley To Send Deputies To Return Women To Reformatory

MARYSVILLE, July 26 — A bread and water diet for at least three days and solitary confinement for 30 days or more, with all hope of special privileges or an eventual parole gone, was the prospect awaiting Hammer Slayer Velma West when she is returned from Dallas, Tex., to Marysville reformatory.

Superintendent Marguerite Reiley, who before the escape believed she had reconstructed the murderess and who rewarded Velma with the privileges of a trusty, will determine her punishment.

DALLAS, Tex., July 26 — Velma West and Mary Ellen Richards, captured in Dallas following their escape from a state reformatory in Ohio, today stated that they would waive extradition to Ohio to resume their interrupted imprisonment.

DALLAS, Tex., July 26—"One little adventure in this dull life of mine" was at an end today for Velma West, 32-year-old hammer murderess who escaped June 19 from the Marysville, O., women's reformatory.

A police hunt that had stretched into every corner of the nation came to an end when three Dallas detectives walked up to the woman and one of her fugitive companions, Mary Ellen Richards, 24, of Cincinnati, in the Dallas market district last night.

Two other women who joined Mrs. West and Miss Richards in the jail break have not been found. Mrs. West, who readily admitted her identity, said the group had split up after the break. Florence Sheline, 23, of Gallipolis, left them while they were hitch-hiking to Dallas and Virginia Brawdy, 19, of Akron, left them after arrival in the Texas city, she said.

When she escaped, Mrs. West left behind a note saying: "I must have one little adventure in this dull life of mine. If this should in any way cause you trouble, I shall come back immediately."

Tip Brings Arrest
But it was only because of a routine "tip" that the Dallas authorities were able to recapture her. The homicide squad was checking the possibility today that Miss Brawdy might still be in the city's underworld.

Eleven years of a life sentence—more than a year of it in solitary confinement, she told officers—had worn the nerves of the woman who was found guilty of (Continued on Page Two)

STRIKER NABBED FOR SCRATCHING WORKERS' CARS

CLEVELAND, July 26—A striker was arrested today at the Fisher body plant of General Motors where a strike of C.I.O.-United Automobile Workers is in progress.

Police said the man, Robert Stewart, 27, was scratching the bodies of non-strikers' automobiles. Stewart was released on a waiver. There was no general disorder, although mounted police on one occasion broke a way through the picket lines for non-strikers' cars.

One woman worker fled to cover when part of her clothing was torn off by a woman strike sympathizer.

Company officials said 612 were at work in the plant today, but this figure was disputed by the union. The strike was called in support of a demand for a supplemental agreement for skilled workers.

beating her husband, Thomas Edward West, 26, to death with a claw hammer.

Pale and emaciated, Mrs. West clearly showed the results of a long confinement and told of her despair of ever obtaining any legal means of release.

"After seven years in that place," she told officers, "the board of pardons told me it was useless for me to seek my release any more. Ever since then I was looking for a chance to escape."

The chance came, she said, after a new matron at the reformatory made her a trusty. One of her companions in the break managed to obtain a set of keys to the cells and they fled under cover of darkness.

Had "Good Time"

"Well, I said I wanted to have one more good time before I died," Mrs. West told her captors without apparent emotion. "I had it all right."

The two women were held in the Dallas city jail awaiting an answer from a wire to Ohio authorities as to their disposition.

In a telegram to Mrs. Margaret Reiley, superintendent of the institution, J. M. Fritz, inspector of detectives at Dallas, informed Mrs. Reiley authorities were holding Mrs. West and Miss Richards.

After receiving the telegram, Mrs. Reiley phoned Dallas police and talked to a police officer who she said informed her they were holding the two women who had admitted their identity.

"I believe they really are the girls," Mrs. Reiley told International News Service. "I'm sure of that, although Dallas police told me they hadn't checked their fingerprints yet. I think they are tired of being hunted and are willing to come back."

Mrs. Reiley expressed surprise that Velma and the Richards girl should be picked up together. She thought Mrs. West and Virginia Brawdy, of Akron, were traveling together and that Mary Ellen was with Florence Shelton, of Gallipolis. All four escaped together.

The reformatory official declared she would send Miss Metta Hill, parole officer, and a man deputy to Dallas by train sometime today to bring the girls back.

Afraid of Richards Girl

"I'll send a man with Miss Hill because the Richards girl is dangerous and vicious," Mrs. Reiley stated. "I'm not worried about Velma."

Mrs. West was sentenced to life imprisonment when she pleaded guilty to second degree murder in connection with the slaying of her husband Dec. 6, 1927. She was 21 at the time.

West's body, bound hand and foot, the head crushed by blows from a claw hammer and a table leg, was discovered in the West home at Perry, Lake county village, by his father.

After the slaying, Mrs. West went to Cleveland to attend a party, where she played the piano and sang. Arrested, she maintained she was innocent for 24 hours, then suddenly confessed.

For a while after she was committed to Marysville she was in trouble much of the time. She spent more than a year in solitary confinement over a period of years.

When Mrs. Reiley became matron, Velma became a model prisoner and eventually got the job of receptionist at the institution. Her freedom in that position permitted her to obtain copies of keys to effect her escape.

The Richards girl was sentenced to 10 to 25 years for robbery. The two still at large are Miss Shelton, 23, convicted in 1937 of breaking and entering, and Miss Brawdy, 19, sentenced for incorrigibility.

CLEVELAND, July 26 — Mrs. B. L. Van Woert, Velma West's mother, said today she is "very glad to have it over and know that Velma has been captured."

Advised that her daughter had been captured in Dallas, Tex., with one of the three other Marysville reformatory inmates who escaped with her on June 19, Mrs. Van Woert said:

"It's the best thing that could happen to Velma. As for me, it's a great relief to have it all over and know that Velma has been captured."

bounded. He could not sleep until he was given a sedative.

"It's a miracle that boy is alive," said McMoarn. "I never heard anything like it in my 40 years in the woods, and I know one more night of being lost would have finished him."

McMoarn heard the feeble cries — "they sounded like an owl," he said — and paddled across the stream in a canoe. There, huddled on the ground and covered only with a tattered jacket and burlap bag was the boy, object of one of the greatest man-hunts in the history of the Maine woods.

Training Helps Boy
Donn, although covering 60 miles, came back to civilization in a 35-mile line from the mountain top. His amazing vitality coupled with nature lore learned as a Boy Scout were credited with saving his life.

When the boy disappeared eight days ago, 500 men—police, woodsmen, C. C. workers, Boy Scouts, vacationists and other volunteers—aided by airplanes and bloodhounds, searched ceaselessly. Hope had been virtually abandoned that he would be found alive.

ATTORNEY SEEKS TO HAVE JUDGE PLACED IN JAIL

CINCINNATI, July 26—Arrest of a blind municipal court judge on assault and battery charges was sought today by Attorney Aaron Wiesen. He charged that President Judge Samuel W. Bell, 69, attacked him in the court chambers when Wiesen called to discuss a case involving Al Wiesen, the lawyer's brother.

Wiesen applied in Common Pleas court for a writ of mandamus to compel issuance of a warrant for Judge Bell's arrest, saying the city prosecutor refused to issue one.

JUSTICE OUSTS MEDICAL SUIT

Government's Anti-Trust Charges Collapse In District Court

WASHINGTON, July 26—The federal government's anti-trust suit against the American Medical Association and allied associations, collapsed in District of Columbia Supreme Court today.

Justice James M. Proctor ruled that in his opinion "medical practice is not a trade within the meaning of Section Three of the Sherman act."

The justice's opinion tore down the government's case against the association, the district medical society, the Harris County Medical Society of Houston, Tex., and the 21 prominent physicians named as co-defendants.

Justice Proctor's action upheld the A. M. A.'s demurrer to the indictment, and gave the forces of organized medicine a complete victory in the first phase of the court battle.

The government, to carry the fight further, must appeal to a higher court. This step was expected, although Department of Justice officials would not say what their next move would be, pending a thorough study of the Proctor ruling.

The defendants, named in the indictment returned last December after nearly three months of deliberation by a specially impaneled grand jury, were accused of acting in restraint of trade in their fight against Washington's pioneer medical cooperative, the Group Health Association.

"In my opinion medical practice is not a trade within the meaning of section three of the Sherman act," Justice Proctor said. And in those few words he destroyed the framework for the indictment of organized medicine.

FOUR TIE AFTER QUALIFIER FOR PUBLINKS HONOR

MOUNT PLEASANT GOLF COURSE, BALTIMORE, July 26 — A four-way tie for a National Golf medal was written into the records today as match play opened in the U. S. public links championship.

Figuring in the sensational tie for 36-hole qualifying round honors (par equalling 144) were Arthur Armstrong, 21, Honolulu clerk; Jack Taulman, 22, Columbus (Indiana) workman who said he had "retired" to play golf; Gerry Bert, Jr., 18, Seattle junior champion, and Luke Barnes, 19, Atlanta school boy.

Three of the co-medallists were in the lower bracket as the 64-man fight for the national crown opened on a match play basis today. Barnes, the only 144-shooter in the upper bracket, met Gwin, Tulsa, Okla. In the lower section, Armstrong played Ade Fordham, St. Paul; Bert met Bob Clark, St. Paul and Taulman engaged Louis Cyr, Oregon railroad worker who was runner-up last year at Cleveland.

BANK HOLDS DESTINY OF CHICAGO WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, July 26—The First National Bank of Chicago was looking for a "good baseball fan" among its executives today to install him as president of the Chicago White Sox.

The bank takes over control of the American league club as trustee under the will of J. Louis Comiskey, late owner and president. Terms of the will were revealed yesterday.

After announcing that the bank contemplates no immediate change in club policies, but would appoint a president as soon as possible, Bank President Edward Eagle Brown stated:

"Our plans are not complete, but the first step will be to select a man to take Mr. Comiskey's place. It is too early to say who he will be, but I can tell you the bank has plenty of good baseball fans, and one of them will get the job."

Comiskey left all his shares in the White Sox in trust for his widow, his son, Charles II, 13, and his two daughters, Grace Lou, 18, and Dorothy Elizabeth, 22.

Orders tightening the embargo on British goods and stimulating renewed anti-English demonstrations emanated from Peiping.

The Japanese controlled political party ordered branches in the provinces of Honan, Shansi, Shantung and Hopei to clamp down against the British despite assurances contained in the Anglo-Japanese accord recently negotiated in Tokyo that Nippon would curb anti-British activities.

West's body, bound hand and foot, the head crushed by blows from a claw hammer and a table leg, was discovered in the West home at Perry, Lake county village, by his father.

After the slaying, Mrs. West went to Cleveland to attend a party, where she played the piano and sang. Arrested, she maintained she was innocent for 24 hours, then suddenly confessed.

For a while after she was committed to Marysville she was in trouble much of the time. She spent more than a year in solitary confinement over a period of years.

When Mrs. Reiley became matron, Velma became a model prisoner and eventually got the job of receptionist at the institution. Her freedom in that position permitted her to obtain copies of keys to effect her escape.

The Richards girl was sentenced to 10 to 25 years for robbery. The two still at large are Miss Sheline, 23, convicted in 1937 of breaking and entering, and Miss Brawdy, 19, sentenced for incorrigibility.

CLEVELAND, July 26 — Mrs. B. L. Van Woert, Velma West's mother, said today she is "very glad to have it over and know that Velma has been captured."

Advised that her daughter had been captured in Dallas, Tex., with one of the three other Marysville reformatory inmates who escaped with her on June 19, Mrs. Van Woert said:

"It's the best thing that could happen to Velma. As for me, it's a great relief to have it all over and know that Velma has been captured."

bounded. He could not sleep until he was given a sedative.

"It's a miracle that boy is alive," said McMoarn. "I never heard anything like it in my 40 years in the woods, and I know one more night of being lost would have finished him."

McMoarn heard the feeble cries — "they sounded like an owl," he said — and paddled across the stream in a canoe. There, huddled on the ground and covered only with a tattered jacket and burlap bag was the boy, object of one of the greatest man-hunts in the history of the Maine woods.

Training Helps Boy

Donn, although covering 60 miles, came back to civilization in a 35-mile line from the mountain top. His amazing vitality coupled with nature lore learned as a Boy Scout were credited with saving his life.

When the boy disappeared eight days ago, 500 men—police, woodsmen, C. C. C. workers, Boy Scouts, vacationists and other volunteers —aided by airplanes and bloodhounds, searched ceaselessly. Hope had been virtually abandoned that he would be found alive.

ATTORNEY SEEKS TO HAVE JUDGE PLACED IN JAIL

CINCINNATI, July 26—Arrest of a blind municipal court judge on assault and battery charges was sought today by Attorney Aaron Wiesen. He charged that Presiding Judge Samuel W. Bell, 69, attacked him in the court chambers when Wiesen called to discuss a case involving Al Weisen, the lawyer's brother.

Wiesen applied in Common Pleas court for a writ of mandamus to compel issuance of a warrant for Judge Bell's arrest, saying the city prosecutor refused to issue one.

JUSTICE OUSTS MEDICAL SUIT

Government's Anti-Trust Charges Collapse In District Court

WASHINGTON, July 26—The federal government's anti-trust suit against the American Medical Association and allied associations, collapsed in District of Columbia Supreme Court today.

Justice James M. Proctor ruled that in his opinion "medical practice is not a trade within the meaning of Section Three of the Sherman act."

The justice's opinion tore down the government's case against the association, the district medical society, the Harris County Medical Society of Houston, Tex., and the 21 prominent physicians named as co-defendants.

Justice Proctor's action upheld the A. M. A.'s demurrer to the indictment, and gave the forces of organized medicine a complete victory in the first phase of the court battle.

The government, to carry the fight further, must appeal to a higher court. This step was expected, although Department of Justice officials would not say what their next move would be, pending a thorough study of the Proctor ruling.

The defendants, named in the indictment returned last December after nearly three months of deliberation by a specially impaneled grand jury, were accused of acting in restraint of trade in their fight against Washington's pioneer medical cooperative, the Group Health Association.

"In my opinion medical practice is not a trade within the meaning of section three of the Sherman act," Justice Proctor said. And in those few words he destroyed the framework for the indictment of organized medicine.

FOUR TIE AFTER QUALIFIER FOR PUBLINKS HONOR

MOUNT PLEASANT GOLF COURSE, BALTIMORE, July 26 —A four-way tie for a National Golf medal was written into the records today as match play opened in the U. S. public links championship.

Figuring in the sensational tie for 36-hole qualifying round honors (par equalling 144) were Arthur Armstrong, 21, Honolulu clerk; Jack Taulman, 22, Columbus (Indiana) workman who said he had "retired" to play golf; Gerry Bert, Jr., 18, Seattle junior champion, and Luke Barnes, 19, Atlanta school boy.

Three of the co-medallists were in the lower bracket as the 64-man fight for the national crown opened on a match play basis today. Barnes, the only 144-shooter in the upper bracket, met Gwin, Tulsa, Okla. In the lower section, Armstrong played Ade Fordham, St. Paul; Bert met Bob Clark, St. Paul and Taulman engaged Louis Cyr, Oregon railroad worker who was runner-up last year at Cleveland.

BANK HOLDS DESTINY OF CHICAGO WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, July 26—The First National Bank of Chicago was looking for a "good baseball fan" among its executives today to install him as president of the Chicago White Sox.

The bank takes over control of the American league club as trustee under the will of J. Louis Comiskey, late owner and president. Terms of the will were revealed yesterday.

After announcing that the bank contemplates no immediate change in club policies, but would appoint a president as soon as possible, Bank President Edward Eagle Brown stated:

"Our plans are not complete, but the first step will be to select a man to take Mr. Comiskey's place. It is too early to say who he will be, but I can tell you the bank has plenty of good baseball fans, and one of them will get the job."

Comiskey left all his shares in the White Sox in trust for his widow, his son, Charles II, 13, and his two daughters, Grace Lou, 18, and Dorothy Elizabeth, 22.

exigencies prompted the blockade and authoritative sources said the naval move was intended to aid debarcation of large numbers of Nipponese troops in the Canton area.

Embargo Tightened

Orders tightening the embargo on British goods and stimulating renewed anti-English demonstrations emanated from Peiping.

The Japanese controlled political party ordered branches in the provinces of Honan, Shansi, Shantung and Hopeh to clamp down against the British despite assurances contained in the Anglo-Japanese accord recently negotiated in Tokyo that Nippon would curb anti-British activities.

The British owned Tientsin Times, editorially asserted that England, by making concessions to Tokyo "when the concession here is beleaguered and anti-British demonstrations are everywhere fomented" merely sought to strengthen "her hand in Europe."

Observers here openly referred to the British recognition of "special" Japanese "military requirements" in China as a "Far Eastern Munich."

The governor was referring to Dr. James Monroe Smith, ex-head of the university, who fled to Canada the day before Leche stepped out of office. Smith is in jail accused in indictments of defalcations at the university aggregating nearly $1,000,000.

EX-KING

I did not sign articles of abdication.

"I left Spain then to avert bloodshed and civil war. If the people of Spain want me, I am ready to serve them. Before being king, I am a soldier, and my commander is the collective will of my people."

"I know Franco well. It was I who started his military career and advanced him. I shall accede to his orders for they are the orders of the people of Spain. When he shall have conquered, he shall be the voice of Spain. Time will tell. It is too early now to speak of a restoration."

In less precise terms, Alphonso indicated that if his own restoration were impossible, he would step aside in favor of his son Juan, who is in his twenties and has had rigid naval training in the British navy.

RESERVE LAKES USED AS TORRID WAVE GOES ON

Northeastern Area Suffers

VEGETABLES WITHERING

Steady Rain For Several Days Needed To Bring Valued Relief

By International News Service
Damage in the drought stricken Northeastern states rose to new high levels today after a seige of oppressive heat which wrought new havoc in forest and field.

The searing heat which reached 90 degrees in New York wilted vegetables that had withstood the drought because of the prevailing cool weather, prematurely ripened apples and other orchard fruits, bringing out worthless undersized crops, and brought on a new wave of forest fires.

Water was diverted from reserve lakes in Palsades Interstate park to the United States Military academy at West Point for the needs of that institution.
Water supplies throughout the area were being curtailed in many sections as reservoirs reached lower and lower levels.

Scattered thundershowers predicted for tomorrow gave little promise of help. A steady rain of several days duration is needed to overcome the drought of the 26 days of July during which not more than a fraction of an inch of precipitation has fallen.

Scores of forest fires were burning throughout the drought area where lawns and parks bore the characteristic yellowish appearance brought by the withering heat.

Hail Adds To Loss
Massachusetts was visited in spots by a freakish thunderstorm accompanied by hail which destroyed crops already badly damaged by the lack of water.

William Casey, Massachusetts state commissioner of agriculture, said the farmers faced tremendous losses unless substantial rain falls within the next few days.

In New Jersey, William H. Allen, secretary of the state board of agriculture, reported farmers were harvesting their crops despite their condition. Every rain-less day means farther retardation, he explained, but added a belief that farmers had tended to exaggerate the seriousness of the situation. The drought has, however, Allen said, reduced the quality of crops and may finally render them worthless for marketing unless alleviated.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND

The United States Secret Service's unceasing war against counterfeiters is thrillingly depicted in "Code of the Secret Service," the second in a series of Warner Bros. pictures starring Ronald Reagan, which opens at the Grand theatre tomorrow.

It is a sinister band of counterfeiters operating across the Mexican border that Reagan is assigned to round up in this exciting film. Reagan gets into some dangerous scrapes "down below the line." When a buddy is killed, and the operative is accused of the murder, he has to clear out, sought by the police.
Out of the frying pan into the fire, he is captured by the head of the gang. He escapes, only to be caught by Mexican authorities and jailed for the murder of his pal.

Then managing to break out of the jail, he and Rosella Towne, playing an American rancher's daughter, are captured by the gang. They are both slated to die, but overpower their captor and escape just as the mission in which they were held is blown up, to hide its secret from the Mexican cavalry troop on the way to capture it.

Two members of the cast of the first picture of the series appear in "Code of the Secret Service," Eddie Foy, Jr. and Rosella Towne.
New members of the cast are Moroni Olsen, Edgar Edwards, Jack Mower, John Gallaudet and Joseph King.

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

more than busy. They played on Stalin's known suspicion of his army. They knew that behind the famous purges of the Red Army was Stalin's fear that the generals would become too powerful, would overthrow him and take Russia.
Stalin, they also knew, seldom sees the army, almost never consults with the present generals, profoundly distrusts them.

So the Hitler strategists played up to Stalin the fact that in any French and British alliance, his army would have to go into immediate action. And this is the last thing Stalin wants; for a war puts the generals in the ascendency, might give them the whip hand over him.

On the other hand, the Hitler diplomats pointed out that if Stalin cooperated with Germany, all he had to do was remain aloof,
sell them food and raw materials,
but not risk war in any manner.
Hitler, Stalin was told, would take the risks and do the actual squeezing of Poland.

DIVIDE POLAND

And the final bait put before Stalin was that if he played ball with Hitler, Poland would be divided between Germany and Russia. Germany would take the Corridor and western Poland.
Central Poland would become a sort of Luxembourg, while eastern Poland, with the Ukraine, would go to Russia. Hitler even promised the Baltic states to Stalin.

Of course, it was a promise identical to that which tempted Poland when Hitler moved into Czechoslovakia. He told the Poles that if they would merely keep out of the row, they could have Tetschen and the section of Czechoslovakia they claimed. The Poles fell for this, and now find their southern border, where Czechoslovakia once was, lined with German troops.

Perhaps forgetting the Czech-Polish lesson, Stalin is reported to be tempted sorely by the Hitler offer—so tempted that he is going to wait a long time before doing any business with the Allies.

That is why things look pessimistic in Europe today. Without Russian support, the balance of power which the French and British have been trying to build against Hitler, falls far short, and Hitler has greater temptations to risk war with Poland—especially with the American neutrality pact unaltered.

RESERVE LAKES USED AS TORRID WAVE GOES ON

Northeastern Area Suffers Intensely; West Point Academy Assisted

VEGETABLES WITHERING

Steady Rain For Several Days Needed To Bring Valued Relief

By International News Service
Damage in the drought stricken Northeastern states rose to new high levels today after a seige of oppressive heat which wrought new havoc in forest and field.

The searing heat which reached 90 degrees in New York wilted vegetables that had withstood the drought because of the prevailing cool weather, prematurely ripened apples and other orchard fruits, bringing out worthless undersized crops, and brought on a new wave of forest fires.

Water was diverted from reserve lakes in Palisades Interstate park to the United States Military academy at West Point for the needs of that institution. Water supplies throughout the area were being curtailed in many sections as reservoirs reached lower and lower levels.

Scattered thundershowers predicted for tomorrow gave little promise of help. A steady rain of several days duration is needed to overcome the drought of the 26 days of July during which not more than a fraction of an inch of precipitation has fallen.

Scores of forest fires were burning throughout the drought area where lawns and parks bore the characteristic yellowish appearance brought by the withering heat.

Hail Adds To Loss

Massachusetts was visited in spots by a freakish thunderstorm accompanied by hail which destroyed crops already badly damaged by the lack of water.

William Gasey, Massachusetts state commissioner of agriculture, said the farmers faced tremendous losses unless substantial rain falls within the next few days.

In New Jersey, William H. Allen, secretary of the state board of agriculture, reported farmers were harvesting their crops despite their condition. Every rainless day means farther retardation, he explained, but added a belief that farmers had tended to exaggerate the seriousness of the situation. The drought has, however, Allen said, reduced the quality of crops and may finally render them worthless for marketing unless alleviated.

more than busy. They played on Stalin's known suspicion of his army. They knew that behind the famous purges of the Red Army was Stalin's fear that the generals would overthrow him and take Russia. Stalin, they also knew, seldom sees the army, almost never consults with the present generals, profoundly distrusts them.

So the Hitler strategists played up to Stalin the fact that in any French and British alliance, his army would have to go into immediate action. And this is the last thing Stalin wants; for a war puts the generals in the ascendancy, might give them the whip hand over him.

On the other hand, the Hitler diplomats pointed out that if Stalin cooperated with Germany, all he had to do was remain aloof, sell them food and raw materials, but not risk war in any manner. Hitler, Stalin was told, would take the risks and do the actual squeezing of Poland.

DIVIDE POLAND

And the final bait put before Stalin was that if he played ball with Hitler, Poland would be divided between Germany and Russia. Germany would take the Corridor and western Poland. Central Poland would become a sort of Luxemburg, while eastern Poland, with the Ukraine, would go to Russia. Hitler even promised the Baltic states to Stalin.

Of course, it was a promise identical to that which tempted Poland when Hitler moved into Czechoslovakia. To tell the Poles that if they would merely keep out of the row, they could have Tetschen and the section of Czechoslovakia they claimed. The Poles felt for this, and now find their southern border, where Czechoslovakia once was, lined with German troops.

The United States Secret Service's unceasing war against counterfeiters is thrillingly depicted in "Code of the Secret Service," the second in a series of Warner Bros. pictures starring Ronald Reagan, which opens at the Grand theatre tomorrow.

It is a sinister band of counterfeiters operating across the Mexican border that Reagan is assigned to round up in this exciting film. Reagan gets into some dangerous scrapes "down below the line." When a buddy is killed, and the operative is accused of the murder, he has to clear out, sought by the police. Out of the frying pan into the fire, he is captured by the head of the gang. He escapes, only to be caught by Mexican authorities and jailed for the murder of his pal.

Then managing to break out of the jail, he and Rosella Towne, playing an American rancher's daughter, are captured by the gang. They are both slated to die, but overpower their captor and escape just as the mission in which they were held is blown up, to hide its secret from the Mexican cavalry troop on the way to capture it.

WAR PREVENTION

IT is probably true, as many intelligent observers are saying, that "the only way for America to escape war is to prevent war."

A general war would almost certainly drag us in again. Intelligent public and private effort throughout this country should be directed with that end in view.

A great deal of public and private effort today is not being so directed. Some of the present attitude is blind pacifism which adopts the ostrich method. Some of it is ignorance, based on failure to study the history of the last war and the current world situation. Some of it is, consciously or unconsciously, political.

If the world gets on fire again, the chances are, no matter how we feel or what we say now, that we shall be dragged into it as we were last time.

If this reasoning is true, the foremost aim of Americans at present should be to prevent war and to join intelligent efforts to that end.

There are two ways suggested to prevent war. The first is the way of "appeasement." That is, buying off aggressive powers by giving them at least some of the things they say they want. Premier Chamberlain's effort to do that, at other countries' expense, has failed.

There might be better results if Britain and her imperial allies, the "have" powers, would try giving away some of their own property, and the former German colonies that the British do not own, but hold tightly under the League of Nations "mandates". So far, the imperial democracies refuse to do that. America could urge them to make such sacrifice.

America could also offer an alternative, in case that appeal was refused by Hitler and Mussolini. America could say clearly and officially that America would supply arms to defensive democracies threatened by aggressive powers. And there is a strong belief in this country that such a pledge would stop the potential aggressors, if they are still sane.

INCREASING CRIME

MORE federal convictions of criminals, larger Federal prison population and progress in the building program of the Federal Bureau of Prisons are announced in the current report of the Justice Department of the United States government. The convictions are considered evidence of good work on the part of federal attorneys and their assistants and the building advance as evidence of improved prison conditions—less over-crowding, more preparation for health and rehabilitation of prisoners, and so on.

World At A Glance

of Manhattan, new chairman of the house of representatives' foreign affairs committee, has wanted that particular chairmanship for a long time, though he regrets the fashion in which he finally acquired it. That is to say, his predecessor, Congressman Sam D. McReynolds of Tennessee, died recently and Sol succeeded him by right of seniority. However, he'd been acting chairman for some time, the Tennessee lawmaker's last illness having been a long one, with the New Yorker pinch hitting at the committee's head during the interval. An acting chairmanship isn't the same thing, though, as the real article. Now Sol has the latter.

European and Asiatic conditions being what they are today, the two congressional chambers' foreign relations committees are vitally important. Their chairmen bulk correspondingly largely in the public eye and it's only human for legislators to fancy such positions.

Sol got into his acting chairmanship at an awkward juncture. The neutrality row was raging violently on Capitol Hill. Senator Nye's law, depriving the White House of any discretion whatsoever, in the event of an overseas conflict was (and is yet) in effect. President Roosevelt and State Secretary Hull took (and still take) the view that Uncle Sam's neutrality will be safer if a modicum of judgment is left to the executive end of the government in wartime emergencies. Congressman Bloom, agreeing with F. D. R. and Secretary Hull, proposed an act in conformity with what they suggested. The absolute neutralists tied this bill up in a parliamentary bowknot. It isn't beaten, but neither is it passed. Sol did a good job with it, nevertheless. Maybe he'll get away with it later—at the next congressional session possibly, or at a special one, if events pop was soon after the World war. The Italian celebrity, Gabriel d'Annunzio, was raising hordes at Trieste, on the Adriatic. "We," said the syndicalists, "will put an end to this persecution."

So they advised Miss Bloom. "Go over to Trieste and get an interview with d'Annunzio; we'll print it."

Instantly, "Certainly," said Sol. Thereupon he, Mrs. Bloom and Vera started for Trieste. But they needed an official introduction to Gabriele. Sol knew that Benito Mussolini, then a comparatively obscure newspaper editor in Milan, was in close touch with Signor d'Annunzio. So they stopped off in Milan to see Signor Mussolini. They found him absorbing a scuttle of suds in his newspaper office. Miss Bloom got her introduction, she got an elegant interview from Gabriele, and she left that syndicate's tongue hanging out in astonishment.

THENCEFORWARD? From that time forth the Blooms were in close cahoots with the Mussolinis—until Benito turned anti-Semitic, for the Blooms are Jews. The clash is a pity. Sol has a barrelful of money. He's one of the best Americans ever invented.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN.

HULL HEARS ALLIANCE DOOMED

WASHINGTON — It is now generally known that the chief row at the White House neutrality conference was between austere Cordell Hull and shaggy-maned Senator Borah over whether war was likely to break soon and why.

What never was known, however—because Mr. Hull did not unburden himself to Borah—was the nature of the alarming reports from Europe, reports which made Hull believe a serious European crisis was imminent.

The Secretary of State has had many reports from his European observers, all pessimistic. But the worst, and probably the one he had in mind during the Borah argument was regarding the confidential conversations between the French and British and Soviet Russia.

These indicate that there will be no alliance between these two groups of powers against Hitler. They even indicate that Stalin is flirting with der Fuehrer.

Stalin holds the balance of power in Europe. This is why the war clouds are getting blacker.

INSIDE RUSSIAN STORY

The complete story of the Russian-French-British conversations was just obtained by the State Department recently.

Partially in the dark, the State Department was getting worried about what was going on in Moscow. Three months had passed with no results. So they asked one of the interested parties for a complete fill-in. This is the story, briefly summarized, that came back.

When the ex-Allies first started conversations with Stalin, all they offered him was security against a future German attack upon the Ukraine. In return for this they wanted Stalin to pledge the actual and definite use of the Russian army to defend Poland in case of war with Germany.

Stalin replied that the German threat to the Ukraine was as yet theoretical, and a long way off, if at all. On the other hand, war between Poland and Germany might be just around the corner.

Therefore, he wanted something more tangible from France and Britain.

He further pointed out that a German attack on Russia would not come through Poland, but through the Baltic states of Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia. The armies of these countries, he continued, not only were weak, but the countries were dominated in part by German feudal lords. Therefore Stalin demanded the right to go into the Baltic states with Russian troops in advance of a German attack in order to prepare for it, if necessary.

At this the French and British threw up their hands. They saw this not as a Russian defense measure but as a move to extend the Soviet Union. They figured that if Russian troops ever got into the Baltic states they would never get out.

So the French and British hedged and counter-hedged, extending over a long period.

First Woman Doctor's Path Was Thorny

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

AMONG all the doctor books and medical reminiscences, such as the Horse and Buggy Doctor, by Dr. Arthur Hertzler, and Consultation Room, by Dr. Loomis, one recent addition stands out because of the uniqueness of the writer's experiences.

The title is Elizabeth Garrett Anderson, by L. G. Anderson. It is the fine story of a brave fight against prejudice and malice and hypocrisy.

Elizabeth Garrett was an Englishwoman who decided 50 years ago to be a practicing physician. Today such a resolution would not be noticed. Then it was considered not only a peculiarity, but a breach of good taste and good morals. I have had in my classes in medical school at least two women a year for the past 15 years. Nobody in the classes considers whether they are women or men. We never think of their sex. Questions and problems that are common to all human beings are discussed as all such problems should be discussed, frankly and factually.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Cruel Oppositions But it was not so in the days that Elizabeth Anderson matriculated at the University of Edinburgh Medical School. She suffered snub, rudeness, silliness, bitter opposition and downright insults. It does not seem possible, reading her record, that human beings could be as cruel as they were. But when one thinks of the pogroms and horrors that have gone on in our time, one can realize that we have a long road to go to rise completely above the ape.

Elizabeth Garrett had a strong supporter in her father. And she had an inspirational meeting with Emily, another rebel against man, who was the first mistress of Giron, the first girls' school in England. They were both against the tyranny that ordained that a gentlewoman could get no paid job except that of a governess; needlework and Magnall's Questions did not satisfy their souls.

When Elizabeth Garrett applied for matriculation at the University of Edinburgh, the senate voted to withdraw her request. When she was up for her finals, the Society of Apothecaries tried to refuse her the right of examination. When they were forced to give way, by the threat of legal action, they at once passed resolutions to attempt to prevent any other woman to be qualified.

This was, of course, only the beginning. After her entrance into the medical profession she found prejudice against her on all sides. Sick people did not want to go to a woman doctor. She slipped into the British Medical Association at the meeting of 1875, and those so-called liberal men were so appalled that they proposed and passed a resolution to keep women out of their assemblies and their debates.

But Elizabeth Garrett, resolution or no resolution, went to every assembly and spoke at every meeting, year after year, until the rule was at last expunged in 1892.

She was an indomitable woman and this record, told largely from her letters, is good reading and a most timely reminder against such unsubstantial things as the hates and prejudices that are rife today.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mrs. G. W. W.: "I have been giving my daughter orange juice and beaten raw egg every morning. She has refused them now, declaring so many raw eggs are injurious. Also, she is a great eater of fresh tomatoes. Some tell her they cause cancer. I want her to continue on these resolutions, because she is a working girl and eats very sparingly most of the time."

Answer: First, as to the beaten raw eggs. When the idea that a raw egg—plain or beaten—is more nutritious or digestible than a cooked egg started, I don't know. But I do know it is not true, any more than cooked meat or, in fact, nearly any cooked food, is less nutritious. Researches have shown that raw egg white is very indigestible and no more nutritious than a cooked egg. And, of course, it becomes monotonous and, as in the case of your daughter, you turn against it. Certainly give her eggs and orange juice, but cook the eggs, and in a different style every day of the week. As to raw tomatoes and the comments made by those who tell her that they cause cancer: This type of advice is enough to make any dietitian angry. Fresh tomatoes have a most splendid nutritional value. They replace orange juice as a source of vitamin C. As to the cancer theory, people had cancer by the droves when everybody thought tomatoes were too poisonous to eat.

Answer: X-ray removes only certain kinds of hairs, and is liable to leave a scar. The best permanent treatment of superfluous hair is electrolysis.

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

THE LOCAL broadcasts about the river's overflow, which the radio station was sending out, were picked up and sent throughout the country.

So it happened that Robert Kennedy, working on an altitude gadget until late, suddenly became aware that the radio was talking about a bad flood. He listened for a moment and was about to dial off when he heard the name of Corinne's college. He waited until the announcer finished, then called the local headquarters of the broadcasting system. He knew the publicity director and asked for him.

"Is there any danger to the college students?"

"Nothing but wet feet at the moment. The dam's going fast, and they'll feel safer away from there for the next day or two. It's the people across the river, in the flats, who are trapped. Not enough boats, dimsy houses, water coming fast."

"What's the answer?"

"Airplanes, if enough can be found. There aren't many private ships and the companies need them. The current's so strong the rowboats can't hold their own, anyway, but the ships that land on water can pick up people and there's a tall canning factory with a flat roof, where a plane can come in and take the others."

"How soon will the water be sweeping the houses away?"

"Doing it now. Just got a report."

"I'll start out right away."

"Hey, wait," the man called. "There are pilots out that way! It's not a lark with wires falling. His voice softened. 'But gosh, if you want to go, warm up your engine. I'll put it over the air. Others should follow you.'"

So it happened that Sarah Anne, alone at the window in the dormitory living room, heard the message that the flyer and young solicitor, Robert Kennedy, had volunteered his airplane and was hurrying westward to aid in the rescue work.

She sat down on the stairs, limp and breathless. Robert was coming here. Out there, in the dark and the wind and the danger, he was winging a swift way because lives were endangered. Aviation was not a game one played in the sky. It was a sacred trust, to be used for humanity.

If only she could do something, too! If she could atone for those few weeks of unnecessary risk by being courageous, just once. She did not think now of the doubts which Robert Kennedy had entertained about her. She knew only that she must be worthy in his sight.

She looked into the night. She could not go out there. She must wait until morning. She went back to the game room, but it was so crowded that she could not find a place to sit, so she walked down to Corinne's room, undressed, took a shower, put on her underthings again and curled up on the bed to take a nap. She looked at her new clothes and a rueful smile twisted her lips. These were the first new things that were really lovely she ever had owned. And now the flood had come and probably they couldn't be saved. But that didn't matter. Beyond the river houses went down the sweep of water.

She did not waken until Corinne came running into the room. "Sarah Anne, wake up. It's morning, and the dam just went! Didn't you hear it? And Robert Kennedy is flying around outside trying to get your attention."

Corinne began to wash her face quickly. Then she rouged her pale cheeks. "It's grand of him to come to everybody's aid. But I told him you were coming that night he took me to dinner, and he remembered. That must be why he's flying around here when there's so much to do."

"YOU'RE here!" That was a new thought. And it wasn't a worthy one, Sarah Anne knew. But after all, Bob had flown to Corinne's defense figuratively that night in the lodge. Why would it be so unusual for him to fly literally to her aid now?

She told herself that it was all right, of course, but she did not get near the windows, but let Corinne wash. When the plane circled for the last time and flew off she put on her red woolen dress and fur jacket, and powdered her nose. She put the brown hat on top of her curls, picked up the brown pocket-book and gloves, and stuffed handkerchiefs into the coat pockets. She had a feeling that she would not see the room again.

The water had passed the downstairs windows and breakfast was being served cafeteria style, on the second floor, in a study room.

The radio announcer began to follow the flyers. He mentioned a rescue of Robert Kennedy's. He said that more flyers had offered their aid, inspired by Kennedy voluntary services. He added that the eastern birdman was directing the rescue work on the roof of the canning plant. He was taking off three people at a time and flying them up to the hills to an emergency relief station.

It was nearly dusk when the rain began to slow up. The college students had been gathered into the two highest buildings on the campus. The rescue work was under control. All day Sarah Anne had watched Robert's ship, wondering if he knew she was near, hoping that he did, that perhaps that knowledge had drawn him here. Not that it was important. He would have heeded a danger call anyway.

Then, at four o'clock, the radio sent through an emergency call. A woman had been stricken with pneumonia as she waited for the waters to abate so a boat could reach the roof where she and some neighbors were stranded.

Her fever was 104 and mounting. Fortunately, by some strange twist of fate, a physician was in the group of stricken people. He was asking for a fast and thorough new drug, which he said would be the woman's only chance of surviving.

"The woman is delicious," the announcer stated. "Her only hope lies in these small white pills. The local medical association confirms the opinion that they will offer a chance at life. The pills are administered two doses three hours apart, then a dose every four hours.

"One day's treatment under this wonder-working medicine has been known to destroy all pneumococci. However, if there is a delay of many hours—and it must necessarily be so if she stays on the roof—aid may come too late. The wind would sweep away the medicine if dropped. So a call is going forth for a parachute jumper who will make the attempt."

Sarah Anne stood up. She was not a student. She did not need the dean's permission for any action. She went down to the floor that was level with the water and motioned to a boatman who came near. Here the water was quieter.

"Can you take me somewhere to contact the radio station?" She explained and the youth nodded quickly.

"Jump in, Florence Nightingale. I'll take charge."

Less than 30 minutes later, as he rested a moment, Robert received a message. A man from the local radio station was waiting for him when he brought some passengers to the refugee quarters. As the ship settled down on the cleared space which made it possible to land, the man said:

"A girl named Sarah Anne Melton, a parachute jumper, has offered to bail out with the medicine, to keep it from getting lost or wet. Says she knows how to work a chute. One of the boys has the medicine and a chute for her. But she gave you as a witness she can do it. So we thought we'd better play safe."

Robert Kennedy leaned forward. "Where is she now?"

"At the local airport. It's still in use. Soggy and bad, though—we can send a radio message out and she'd better get started. It's all right, it is."

Then he pulled his goggles over his narrowed eyes, climbed back into the cockpit, and left with a roar.

Sarah Anne, standing near the impatient pilot of the other ship, knew that it was Robert Kennedy who was zooming in. She had not wanted to give his name as a reference, but the local radio station, in charge of the flood work, had emphatically refused to let her make the parachute jump unless she could prove that she knew what she was doing. She had hoped to be aloft before Bob came.

At least, so she had told herself. But she had been watching that sky, waiting. Her hat had blown off on the water and her curls were held back by a narrow red ribbon that matched her dress. Her new fur jacket was damp. Her feet were wet. But she thought of none of these things. Robert's ship was almost in.

WAR PREVENTION

It is probably true, as many intelligent observers are saying, that "the only way for America to escape war is to prevent war."

A general war would almost certainly drag us in again. Intelligent public and private effort throughout this country should be directed with that end in view.

A great deal of public and private effort today is not being so directed. Some of the present attitude is blind pacifism which adopts the ostrich method. Some of it is ignorance, based on failure to study the history of the last war and the current world situation. Some of it is, consciously or unconsciously, political.

If the world gets on fire again, the chances are, no matter how we feel or what we say now, that we shall be dragged into it as we were last time.

If this reasoning is true, the foremost aim of Americans at present should be to prevent war and to join intelligent efforts to that end.

There are two ways suggested to prevent war. The first is the way of "appeasement." That is, buying off aggressive powers by giving them at least some of the things they say they want. Premier Chamberlain's effort to do that, at other countries' expense, has failed.

There might be better results if Britain and her imperial allies, the "have" powers, would try giving away some of their own property, and the former German colonies that the British do not own, but hold tightly under the League of Nations "mandates." So far, the imperial democracies refuse to do that. America could urge them to make such sacrifice.

America could also offer an alternative, in case that appeal was refused by Hitler and Mussolini. America could say clearly and officially that America would supply arms to defensive democracies threatened by aggressive powers. And there is a strong belief in this country that such a pledge would stop the potential aggressors, if they are still sane.

INCREASING CRIME

MORE federal convictions of criminals, larger Federal prison population and progress in the building program of the Federal Bureau of Prisons are announced in the current report of the Justice Department of the United States government. The convictions are considered evidence of good work on the part of federal attorneys and their assistants and the building advance as evidence of improved prison conditions—less over-crowding, more preparation for health and rehabilitation of prisoners, and so on.

World At A Glance

CONGRESSMAN SOL BLOOM of Manhattan, new chairman of the house of representatives' foreign affairs committee, has wanted that particular chairmanship for a long time, though he regrets the fashion in which he finally acquired it. That is to say, his predecessor, Congressman Sam D. McReynolds of Tennessee, died recently and Sol succeeded him by right of seniority. However, he'd been acting chairman for some time, the Tennessee lawmaker's last illness having been a long one, with the New Yorker pinch hitting at the committee's head during the interval. An acting chairmanship isn't the same thing, though, as the real article. Now Sol has the latter. European and Asiatic conditions being what they are today, the two congressional chambers' foreign relations committees are vitally important. Their chairmen bulk correspondingly largely in public eye and it's only human for legislators to fancy such positions. Sol got into his acting chairmanship at an awkward juncture. The neutrality row was raging violently on Capitol Hill. Senator Nye's law, depriving the White House of any discretion whatever, in the event of an overseas

HULL HEARS ALLIANCE DOOMED

WASHINGTON — It is now generally known that the chief row at the White House neutrality conference was between austere Cordell Hull and shaggy-maned Senator Borah over whether war was likely to break soon and why.

What never was known, however—because Mr. Hull did not unburden himself to Borah—was the nature of the alarming reports from Europe, reports which made Hull believe a serious European crisis was imminent.

The Secretary of State has had many reports from his European observers, all pessimistic. But the worst, and probably the one he had in mind during the Borah argument was regarding the confidential conversations between the French and British and Soviet Russia.

These indicate that there will be no alliance between these two groups of powers against Hitler. They even indicate that Stalin is flirting with der Fuehrer.

Stalin holds the balance of power in Europe. This is why the war clouds are getting blacker.

INSIDE RUSSIAN STORY

The complete story of the Russian-French-British conversations was just obtained by the State Department recently.

Partially in the dark, the State Department was getting worried about what was going on in Moscow. Three months had passed with no results. So they asked one of the interested parties for a complete fill-in. This is the story, briefly summarized, that came back.

When the ex-Allies first started conversations with Stalin, all they offered him was security against a future German attack upon the Ukraine. In return for this they wanted Stalin to pledge the actual and definite use of the Russian army to defend Poland in case of war with Germany.

Stalin replied that the German threat to the Ukraine was as yet theoretical, and a long way off, if at all. On the other hand, war between Poland and Germany might be just around the corner.

Therefore, he wanted something more tangible from France and Britain.

He further pointed out that a German attack on Russia would not come through Poland, but through the Baltic states of Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia. The armies of these countries, he continued, not only were weak, but the countries were dominated in part by German feudal lords. Therefore Stalin demanded the right to go into the Baltic states with Russian troops in advance of a German attack in order to prepare for it, if necessary.

At this the French and British threw up their hands. They saw this not as a Russian defense measure but as a move to extend the Soviet Union. They figured that if Russian troops ever got into the Baltic states they would never get out.

So the French and British hedged and counter-hedged, extending over a long period.

First Woman Doctor's Path Was Thorny

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

AMONG all the doctor books and medical reminiscences, such as the Horse and Buggy Doctor, by Dr. Arthur Hertzler, and Consultation Room, by Dr. Loomis, one recent addition stands out because of the uniqueness of the writer's experiences.

The title is Elizabeth Garrett Anderson, by L. G. Anderson. It is the fine story of a brave fight against prejudice and malice and hypocrisy.

Elizabeth Garrett was an Englishwoman who decided 50 years ago to be a practicing physician.

Today such a resolution would not be noticed. Then it was considered not only a peculiarity, but a breach of good taste and good morals. I have had in my classes in medical school at least two women a year for the past 15 years. Nobody in the classes considers whether they are women or men. We never think of their sex. Questions and problems that are common to all human beings are discussed as all such problems should be discussed, frankly and factually.

Cruel Oppositions

But it was not so in the days that Elizabeth Anderson matriculated at the University of Edinburgh Medical School. She suffered snubs, rudeness, silliness, bitter opposition and downright insults. It does not seem possible, reading her record, that human beings could be as cruel as they were. But when one thinks of the pogroms and horrors that have gone on in our time, one can realize that we have a long road to go to rise completely above the ape.

Elizabeth Garrett had a strong supporter in her father. And she had an inspirational meeting with Emily, another rebel against man, who was the first mistress of Gorton, the first girls' school in England. They were both against the tyranny that ordained that a gentleman could get no paid job except that of a governess; needlework and Magrull's Questions did not satisfy their souls.

When Elizabeth Garrett applied for matriculation at the University of Edinburgh, the senate voted to withdraw her request. When she was up for her finals, the Society of Apothecaries tried to refuse her the right of examination. When they were forced to give way, by the threat of legal action, they at once passed resolutions to attempt to prevent any other woman to be qualified.

This was, of course, only the beginning. After her entrance into the medical profession she found prejudice against her on all sides. Sick people did not want to go to a woman doctor. She slipped into the

THE LOCAL broadcasts about the river's overflow, which the radio station was sending out, were picked up and sent throughout the country.

He listened for a moment and was about to dial off when he heard the name of Corinne's college. He waited until the announcer finished, then called the local headquarters of the broadcasting system. She did not waken until Corinne came running into the room. "Sarah Anne, wake up. It's morning, and the dam just went! Didn't you hear it? And Robert Kennedy is flying around outside trying to get your attention."

Corinne began to wash her face quickly. Then she rouged her pale cheeks. "It's grand of him to come to everybody's aid. But I told him you were coming that night he took me to dinner, and he remembered. That must be why he's flying around here when there's so much to do."

"YOU'RE here!" That was a new thought. And it wasn't a worthy one, Sarah Anne knew. But after all, Bob had flown to Corinne's defense figuratively that night in the lodge. Why would it be so unusual for him to fly literally to her aid now?

She told herself that it was all right, of course, but she did not go near the windows, but let Corinne wave. When the plane circled for the last time and flew off she put on her red woolen dress and fur jacket and powdered her nose. She put the brown hat on top of her curls, picked up the brown pocket-book and gloves, and stuffed handkerchiefs into the coat pockets. She had a feeling that she would not see the room again.

The water had passed the downstairs windows and breakfast was being served cafeteria style, on the second floor, in a study room.

The radio announcer began to follow the flyers. He mentioned a rescue of Robert Kennedy's. He said that more flyers had offered their aid, inspired by Kennedy's voluntary services. He added that the eastern birdman was directing the rescue work on the roof of the canning plant. He was taking off three people at a time and flying them up to the hills to an emergency relief station.

It was nearly dusk when the rain began to blow up. The college students had been gathered into the two highest buildings on the campus. The rescue work was under control. All day Sarah Anne had watched Robert's ship, wondering if he knew she was near, hoping that he did, that perhaps that knowledge had drawn him here. Not that it was important. He would have heeded a danger call anyway.

Then, at four o'clock, the radio sent through an emergency call. A woman had been stricken with pneumonia as she waited for the waters to abate so a boat could reach the roof where she and some neighbors were stranded.

Her fever was 104 and mounting. Fortunately, by some strange twist of fate, a physician was in the group of stricken people. He was asking for a fast and thorough new drug, which he said would be the woman's only chance of surviving.

"The woman is delirious," the announcer stated. "Her only hope lies in these small white pills. The local medical association confirms the opinion that they will offer a chance at life. The pills are administered two doses three hours apart, then a dose every four hours.

"One day's treatment under this wonder-working medicine has been known to destroy all pneumococci. One of the boys has the medicine and a chute for her. But she gave you as a witness she can do it. So we thought we'd better play safe."

Robert Kennedy leaned forward. "Where is she now?"

"At the local airport. It's still in use. Soggy and bad, though—we can send a radio message out and she'd better get started. It's all right, is it?"

"Send out word that she should wait where she is. I'm going after her. If she jumps, it's from my ship. Understand?"

Then he pulled his goggles over his narrowed eyes, climbed back into the cockpit, and left with a roar.

Sarah Anne, standing near the impatient pilot of the other ship, knew that it was Robert Kennedy who was coming in. She had not wanted to give his name as a reference, but the local radio station, in charge of the flood work, had emphatically refused to let her make the parachute jump unless she could prove that she knew what she was doing. She had hoped to be aloft before Bob came.

At least, so she had told herself. But she had been watching that sky, waiting. Her hat had blown off on the water and her curls were held back by a narrow red ribbon that matched her dress. Invitations to the wedding of Miss Brehmer and Mr. Bell, which will be Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. at Trinity Lutheran church, were issued Monday by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Brehmer.

Large baskets of multi-colored gladioli decorated the rooms where the small tables were set for the dinner served at 7 p. m. Bud vases of rose buds, coral bell, and blue salvia centered the tables, dainty in their party appointments.

Mrs. William Dunlap and Miss Mary Ann Sapp received the prizes for scores when the tallies were added at the close of the games of progressive contract bridge, in play at eight tables.

A shower of lovely miscellaneous gifts was presented the bride-to-be by the guests.

In addition to Miss Brehmer and the hostess covers for the dinner were placed for Mrs. Harold Baughman, Mrs. Edward Phebus, Mrs. Samuel Johnson, Mrs. Fred S. Grant, Mrs. Wallace Crist, Mrs. Robert Brehmer, Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer, Mrs. J. P. Moffitt, Miss Mary Ann Sapp, Miss Anna Vlerhome, Miss Marjorie Mader, Miss Dorothy Beatty, Miss Eleanor Dreisbach, Miss Mary Newmyer, Miss Regina Mack, Miss Mary Crites, Miss Vera Zaenglein, Miss Doris Schreiner, Miss Elizabeth Dowden, Miss Dorothy Fohl, Miss Jean Cryder, Miss Mary K. May, Circleville; Mrs. Festus Walters, New Holland; Mrs. Dunlap, Williamsport; Miss Lydia Given, Miss Dorothy Lyle, Miss Jane Littleton, Mrs. Alfred Henney, Columbus and Mrs. Harold Sheridan, Chillicothe.

Mrs. McGhee Entertains
Bouquets of colorful garden flowers centered the three small tables where the guests were served luncheon Tuesday when Mrs. Harry McGhee of Williamsport entertained at Dun Glen, Chillicothe. The party was arranged by the hostess in honor of Mrs. George Gephart of St. Louis, Mo., who is visiting Mrs. T. B. Gephart of Williamsport.

When tallies were added after the games of progressive contract bridge, score prizes were taken by Mrs. S. B. Metzger, Mrs. William D. Heiskell and Mrs. Harry Dunlap. Mrs. Gephart received an attractive gift from the hostess.

Other guests included Mrs. T. B. Gephart, Mrs. Lee Luellen, Mrs. William Dunlap, Mrs. John Dunlap, Jr., Mrs. Fred Tipton, and Miss Laura McGhee of Williamsport and Mrs. Russell McDill of Frankfort.

Mrs. Heistand Honored
Mrs. Ralph Heistand of W. High street was honored at an evening bridge party when a group of her friends entertained cooperatively, Tuesday, at Sylvia's party home. Mr. and Mrs. Heistand and their daughter will remove in the near future to their new home at Jackson.

Mrs. Heistand received a shower of lovely handkerchiefs from her friends.

Contract bridge was played at four tables after which a salad course was served. Small vases of colorful garden flowers centered the tables, when they were arranged for the lunch.

Included in the guest list were Mrs. Heistand, Mrs. E. W. Weiler, Mrs. James Adams, Mrs. John Magill, Mrs. David Goldschmidt, Mrs. Franklin Kibler, Mrs. Byron Eby, Mrs. Ben Gordon, Mrs. Karl Mason, Mrs. Herman Hill, Mrs. Carl Wallace, Miss Virginia Marion, Mrs. Paul Helwagen, Mrs. George E. Gerhardt, Mrs. Jay Clark of Circleville and Mrs. Robert Terhune of Clarksburg.

When prizes were awarded after the games, Mrs. Weiler, Mrs. Gerhardt and Mrs. Hill were found to be the winners.

NEUTRALITY GOES TO THE COUNTRY

As a result of the White House Conference with leading Senators of both parties neutrality legislation has been abandoned for the present session. It now goes to the country. Mr. Roosevelt and the opposing Senators, like Borah, Nye, Clark of Missouri, may take the stump. The subject is certain to be widely discussed.

What is the issue which the public must now decide? The House of Representatives has passed one bill. The President wants another they differ?

The main point at issue is the sale of arms, ammunition and munitions to nations at war. The Administration wants to remove the existing statutory embargo against such sale. What it really wants is to make America a French and British arsenal.

As the bill finally passed the House the prohibition against the sale of "munitions" was removed. Munitions include such things as automobile trucks, iron ore, probably unarmed airplanes, as well as cotton, wheat, gasoline, etc. Under the bill these may be sold to warring nations. But guns, shells, poison gas, bombs, battle-ships, cruisers, torpedoes, mines, tank armed planes etc., may not. In short, the Administration lost in its effort to permit the sale of the actual instruments of death.

The House action is a victory for the point of view of the National Committee to Keep America out of Foreign Wars, of which Congressman Hamilton Fish is chairman. As a member of that Committee, let men summarize the argument. At Chautauque, N. Y., in August 1936, Mr. Roosevelt welcomed existing legislation as a "safeguard of American neutrality." In that speech he correctly pointed to the pressure to get rich quick on war profits and warned against "the small decisions of each day" which led to war.

But now he wants to be free to make the nation as arsenal for foreign supply of lethal weapons. How would the "small decisions of each day" work out? De do not need to speculate. We have the World War as witness.

England and France are at war, let us say. Huge orders come for bombs, shells, guns, gas. Our munition shops go into 24-hour production. Transportation facilities are geared to move the arms to seaboard. At first cash would be paid for the guns. Soon the cash would run out. What then?

Permitted to do business here, and Germany and Italy unable to do so, through enemy control of the seas, propaganda would get to work. Millions would be spent to color press reports, editorials and the radio, the latter especially. It would be directed to escape the obligation to pay cash. We would again be asked to loan England and France our own money to buy our own goods. The Johnson law against loans to nations in default would be bombarded by foreign propaganda agents as well as by American munitions makers at home, investors, and workers alike.

When the cash is gone we would be told, and correctly, that to refuse credit would be to let our war boom collapse into another major depression. Witness what our ambassador to Britain cabled President Wilson in 1916, "Perhaps our going to war is the only way in which our present preeminent trade position can be maintained and a panic averted."

So under the fever of war orders, vast propaganda, and a skyrocketing stock market in "war babies" we would again sell on credit—which is the same thing as saying we would give them our goods for nothing. For who is now so foolish as to think nations which repudiated after the last World War would not repudiate

Cuttings of coleus, begonias and geraniums can be rooted in July and August for use as house plants next Winter.

Select sturdy shoots and make cuttings three or four inches long. In taking the cuttings make a clean cut with a sharp knife immediately below a joint where a leaf grows out. Next remove the lower leaves from the cutting and plant it two inches deep in a half and half mixture of sand and soil. Keep the soil in which the cutting is planted fairly dry but keep the foliage of the cutting moist. Place a glass tumbler over the cutting as shown in the Garden-Graph. This helps to keep the air around the cutting moist and conserves heat. The cutting should be kept shaded until roots have had a chance to form.

Geraniums grow and flower best when the roots are constricted by a small pot.

after the next World War? Of course they would do so. In fact they would have to. Again we would be left holding the bag—and a new national debt saddled onto our children, which when it gets big enough, will be repudiated at home.

But this is not all. Having gone into the arsenal business, and having made the war our war, we would be asked if we were pikers, if we fought only with metal and not with men. We would again be called Shylocks and vampires living safely behind the Atlantic barrier while sucking the blood of European civilization.

Conservation of our youth would be the next "small decision of each day". The next would be their bodies rotting on foreign soil. Such is the argument of the majority of the House, and Senators Borah, Nye, Hiram Johnson, Bennett Clark, George Gillette, etc., in the Senate. The Bloom bill is the road to war.

On the other hand Mr. Roosevelt contends that he makes war in Europe less likely by making our participation in it more certain. But that is more of a gamble than millions of American mothers wish to take with the bodies of their sons!

RED BIRDS DROP 7-3 GAME, PLAY MILWAUKEE NEXT

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 26—The Columbus Red Birds were to open a series with the Milwaukee Brewers here today in a night game.

The Birds arrived here from Minneapolis, where they finished by taking the short end of a 7 to 3 score.

Harry Smythe, veteran Miller lefthander, was on the mound and seemed to have the Ohioans charmed. It was Smythe's fifth straight victory over Columbus this season.

At St. Paul the Saints took their fifth straight game 3 to 2 from the Toledo Mud Hens. The game was a pitching duel between Art Herring of St. Paul and Floyd Giebel of Toledo. Giebel allowed six hits and Herring seven.

The Kansas City Blues, playing at home, took both games of a double header from the Indianapolis Indians, 9 to 1 and 2 to 0.

Milwaukee ended its series with the Louisville Colonels by winning 8 to 6.

DIZ QUILTS DOGHOUSE TO FACE DODGER CREW

CHICAGO, July 26—Dizzy Dean comes out of the doghouse today to pitch for the Chicago Cubs against the Brooklyn Dodgers. It was Dean's first call to duty since his left arm was cut under mysterious circumstances in a New York hotel room eleven days ago.

The big right hander will be seeking his fifth win of the year against one loss.

Legal Notice

Notice for Application Under The Uniform Depository Act.

Applications will be received by the undersigned, at the office of the Board of County Commissioners of Pickaway County, Ohio, until twelve o'clock noon of the 31st day of August, 1939, from any financial institution legally eligible which may desire to submit a written application to be a public depository of the inactive deposits of the public monies of said board, as provided by the Uniform Depository Act, Sections 2226-1 et seq. of the General Code of Ohio.

Applications made in conformity with the following resolution passed on the 24th day of July, 1939.

WHEREAS, the contracts with this board for depositories expire on the 23rd day of August, 1939; and

RESOLVED, That the estimated aggregate amount of public funds subject to the control of said board to be awarded and be on deposit as inactive deposits is not over one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000.00) and the probable maximum amount of public monies to be awarded and be on deposit as active deposits at any time during the period of designation is two hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($250,000.00).

Award of the active deposits of public monies subject to the control of said board of Pickaway County will be made at the same time and place for a period of two years, commencing on the 23rd day of August, 1939, and applications for the same may be combined with applications for designation as a public depository of the inactive deposits but separately awarded.

Applications should be sealed and deposited with the Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners.

FORRESTER SHORT,
County Auditor and Clerk of Board of County Commissioners.

CONTRACTOR BALL CLUB TOO FAST FOR PRINTERS

Frisinger Contractors are far from being the No. 1 team in the City Softball loop, but they would be far out in front if all their opposition were of the calibre of that against which they contested Tuesday evening. The Contractors won 14 to 4 in a game played on the electric company field, employees of The Daily Herald being pitted against the league team.

There were bad throws, pegs to wrong bases, strikeouts on balls far over the batters' heads and on some tosses that bounced before they hit the plate—and there were some more muscles Wednesday, but a good time was had by all.

Kimmel, regular third sacker, pitched for the Contractors, while A. Harold Pearce, Jr., of the proofreading department, and James Ames, display ad chaser, worked on the mound for the publishers.

The newspapermen would like to play some more games with opposition that is not too tough. Any managers interested should call No. 581.

PRIMARY ELECTION NEARING, BUT CIRCLEVILLE POLITICIANS REMAIN QUIET

TWO CONTESTS SCHEDULED FOR AUG. 8 BALLOT

Only Pair Of Precincts To Have Competition, But Entire City Votes

COUNCIL PLACES SOUGHT

Board Clerk Says No One Has Filed Application As Absentee

Lack of interest features the primary for Aug. 8.

There has been practically no political activity shown to date in the two contests, both under the Democratic banner for councilmen, in the primary.

Lawrence Johnson, clerk of the board of elections, reports no applications have been filed to date for either absent or disabled voters' ballots. Absent and disabled voters have until Aug. 3 to file.

William M. Reid, incumbent, and Tull M. Barnes, former councilman, seek the Fourth Ward position in council. James I. Smith, Jr., and George G. Groom, are candidates for the Third Ward position to be vacated by John Neuding, removing from the ward. All those in the Third and Fourth Ward contests are Democrats.

Although there are party contests in only two wards, the entire city will ballot. The vote is expected to be exceptionally light.

There are only two Republicans seeking election. B. T. Hedges, Circleville township justice of peace and former mayor, will oppose Mayor W. B. Cady, Democratic incumbent. Harry G. Gard will oppose John E. Hinrod, Democrat incumbent, for the city treasury job.

The remainder of the slate for city offices at the November election is Democratic. Those seeking reelection are John C. Goeller, president of council; Miss Lillian Young, auditor; Ben H. Gordon, Clarence W. Helvering and Frank Lynch, councilmen at large; J. Donald Mason, First Ward councilman, and J. H. Helweg, Second Ward councilman. Joseph W. Adkins, Jr., is candidate on the Democratic ticket for solicitor. He is unopposed.

17 YOUNG FOLK PLAN TO ATTEND HOCKING CAMP

Seventeen Pickaway county young folk will attend the Older Rural Youth camp session at the Ross-Hocking camp July 29 and 30. Twenty-three have registered to attend the Senior 4-H club camp, July 31 to Aug. 5. The last camp session scheduled in which Pickaway county folk will participate is the Men's camp, Aug. 5 and 6.

There are 31 Pickaway county children attending the Junior 4-H club camp this week. They will return home Saturday. The Junior camp is for children between 10 to 14 years; the Senior camp for those from 14 to 20 years.

Those who have registered to attend the Older Rural Youth camp are Hoyt Timmons, Irene Pontius and Weldon Leist, Pickaway township; Faye Solt, Gerald Solt and Frank Dill, Walnut township; George, Betty, Margaret and Louise Fischer and Josephine Wolfe, Jackson township; Glendal Dick and June Hanawalt, Monroe township; and Emerson and James Sheets, Marvin Dountz and George Neal, Scioto township.

The young folk who have registered for the Senior 4-H club camp are Roselyn and Orin Dreisbach, Jr., and Roger May, Pickaway township; Robert Strous, Saltcreek; Mary Fischer, Jean Goodman and Leroy Newlon, Jr., Jackson township; Juanita Walters and Sarah Skinner, Perry township; Marshall Cupp, Hancel

FARLEY TO KEEP CABINET OFFICE

Postmaster General Quoted As Opposed To Third Term For F. D.

WASHINGTON, July 26—Postmaster General James A. Farley sails for Europe today secure in his cabinet post, opposed to a third term for President Roosevelt and free, on his return, to support any good Democrat for the presidency in 1940.

The President himself sounded the deathknell to a New Deal "palace guard" campaign to oust Farley from the cabinet as a preliminary move to driving him out of the Democratic national chairmanship. In reply to direct questions at his press conference, the President called it "tommyrot" to suggest Braintruster Thomas G. Corcoran could oust Farley from his national chairmanship and added that Farley "unquestionably" would remain in the cabinet on returning from Europe.

On top of this, Farley's friends say he told the President respectfully but firmly at their historic Hyde Park conference that he could not support Mr. Roosevelt for a third term. This declaration, they add, leaves him free to support any other good Democrat—save one—for the presidential nomination next year. The sole exception, say Farleyites, is the new Federal Security administrator, Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana.

Farley's associates believe he also told Mr. Roosevelt of his unalterable opposition to McNutt as the 1940 standard-bearer. At least, they say, it was Farley's purpose to deliver this ultimatum when he left Washington last Friday for the conference. And they point out that Farley has said the conference was "entirely satisfactory to me."

FRIEND HELD TO GRAND JURY ON CHECK CHARGES

Homer L. Friend, 27, formerly of Williamsport Route 1, was bound to the grand jury under $500 bond, Tuesday, when he admitted a charge of forgery before B. T. Hedges, justice of peace. Friend was sent to the county jail when he was unable to furnish bond of $500.

The charge, filed by George Adkins, filling station operator on Route 104 in the northern part of the county, alleges that Friend forged a check for $5 on July 3 on the First National bank of Circleville. He was returned recently from Jackson.

GROUP LINES UP FOR JOURNEY TO POULTRY EVENT

Twenty-six Pickaway county 4-H club members, leaders, vocational agricultural students and farmers have secured tickets for the tour to the seventh World's Poultry Congress next Monday, July 31.

Willis Liston, chairman of the county tours committee, said these folk and any others who may secure tickets by Saturday night will leave the union station of the Pennsylvania railroad in Columbus at 6:20 o'clock Monday morning. According to advice received by Mr. Liston those driving to Columbus will have a special parking area for their automobiles in the Little Miami yards at the corner of Naghten and High streets. A special policeman will be on duty at 5 a. m. to direct cars to this area.

Mr. Liston was also informed that a special coach on the train is being reserved for tour members from Pickaway and Fairfield counties.

Those making the tour include Dwight Bethards Scioto township, who was awarded the trip for winning the essay contest sponsored by the county granges. This essay was on the World's Poultry Congress. Others making the trip are C. E. Moore, vocational agricultural instructor from At-Lanta and John Peck, George Skinner, Dan Steele, and Palmer Peck, students; Mrs. Dwight Rector, Dwight Rector, Jr., Sara Jane Rector, Francis Fraunfelder, John Spencer, and Jean Spencer of Saltcreek township; Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Schleich, Mary Alice Schleich and Helen Schleich, of Deercreek township; Irene Pontius, Hoyt Timmons and Weldon Leist, of Pickaway township; Mrs. William H. Grassele and Miriam Grassele, of Darby township; Faye and Gerald Solt of Walnut township; C. E. Dick and Glendal Dick of Monroe township, and Mrs. Herbert Swayer, of Harrison township.

Mrs. Swayer and Mrs. Rector are chaperons for the Pickaway county 4-H members.

EARLY TUB THUMPERS

BOSTON — With two rival fairs in operation, states from coast to coast are redoubting efforts to entice visitors. But this publicity drive is not new. The states had publicity men as far back as 1616. According to Governor Leverett Saltonstall, back in 1616, Captain John Smith (of Pocahontas fame) prepared maps and pamphlets on the advantages of New England and distributed them abroad. In 1821, English promotion companies engaged in crude advertising with lurid handbills to induce English people to go to America.

SOCIAL SECURITY OFFICER VISITS P. O. THURSDAY

Postmaster A. Hulse Hays will be visited by a representative of the Social Security Board on Thursday July 27, who will maintain office hours in the postoffice from 12 noon to 2 p. m.

The postmaster wishes to call the attention of the citizens of Circleville to the fact that it is the worker's opportunity to become acquainted with his rights and benefits under the Social Security program and to make application for Social Security account number at this time, particularly, since a number of new workers will be entering employment.

The postmaster announces that he has received word from Mr. C. C. Darby, Manager of the Columbus office of the Social Security Board, which serves this community, that account numbers are being issued at the rate of 150 a day to new workers going into employment. In the majority of cases, these workers are students and seasonal employees. Attention is called to the fact that the person who has an account number should always use the same account number during his working life; in this way, only one wage record is set up for each individual.

HERMAN SMITH FILES

Suit for divorce charging neglect of duty was filed in Common Pleas court Tuesday by Herman Smith against Gladys Louise Smith, both of Circleville. They were married April 29, 1935 and have one child, the petition says. Mr. Smith asks custody of the child.

But the "dead line" for filing petitions being slightly more than six weeks away, anything may happen. Council and school board members are to be elected, but not a word has been mentioned as to "who is to be who" for these, believe it or not, important places.

FARLEY TO KEEP CABINET OFFICE

Postmaster General Quoted As Opposed To Third Term For F. D.

WASHINGTON, July 26—Postmaster General James A. Farley sails for Europe today secure in his cabinet post, opposed to a third term for President Roosevelt and free, on his return, to support any good Democrat for the presidency in 1940.

The President himself sounded the deathknell to a New Deal "palace guard" campaign to oust Farley from the cabinet as a preliminary move to driving him out of the Democratic national chairmanship. In reply to direct questions at his press conference, the President called it "tommyrot" to suggest Braintruster Thomas G. Corcoran could oust Farley from his national chairmanship and added that Farley "unquestionably" would remain in the cabinet on returning from Europe.

On top of this, Farley's friends say he told the President respectfully but firmly at their historic Hyde Park conference that he could not support Mr. Roosevelt for a third term. This declaration, they add, leaves him free to support any other good Democrat—save one—for the presidential nomination next year. The sole exception, say Farleyites, is the new Federal Security administrator, Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana.

Farley's associates believe he also told Mr. Roosevelt of his unalterable opposition to McNutt as the 1940 standard-bearer. At least, they say, it was Farley's purpose to deliver this ultimatum when he left Washington last Friday for the conference. And they point out that Farley has said the conference was "entirely satisfactory to me."

FRIEND HELD TO GRAND JURY ON CHECK CHARGES

Homer L. Friend, 27, formerly of Williamsport Route 1, was bound to the grand jury under $500 bond, Tuesday, when he admitted a charge of forgery before B. T. Hedges, justice of peace. Friend was sent to the county jail when he was unable to furnish bond of $500.

The charge, filed by George Adkins, filling station operator on Route 104 in the northern part of the county, alleges that Friend forged a check for $5 on July 3 on the First National bank of Circleville. He was returned recently from Jackson.

TICK BITE FATAL

CHILLICOTHE, July 26—Funeral services were held Wednesday for Sherman Estle, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Landon Estle, of Huntington township, who was Ross county's first victim of Rocky Mountain fever. The fever results from the bite of a tick. Three cases were reported in Ross county last year. There are four cases currently.

877,500 Tickets Being Printed for State Fair

COLUMBUS, July 26—State Fair Manager Win H. Kinnan has filed with State Purchasing Agent C. O. Stark an order to purchase 877,500 State Fair admission tickets.

Anticipating more than the average half million attendance this year Kinnan ordered 625,000 general admission tickets to the fair grounds; 170,000 grandstand tickets; 55,000 Coliseum tickets; 12,500 Cat Show tickets, and 15,000 emergency tickets suitable for use anywhere on the grounds in case daily supplies become exhausted.

GROUP LINES UP FOR JOURNEY TO POULTRY EVENT

Twenty-six Pickaway county 4-H club members, leaders, vocational agricultural students and farmers have secured tickets for the tour to the seventh World's Poultry Congress next Monday, July 31.

Willis Liston, chairman of the county tours committee, said these folk and any others who may secure tickets by Saturday night will leave the union station of the Pennsylvania railroad in Columbus at 6:20 o'clock Monday morning. According to advice received by Mr. Liston those driving to Columbus will have a special parking area for their automobiles in the Little Miami yards at the corner of Nighthelm and High streets. A special policeman will be on duty at 5 a. m. to direct cars to this area.

Mr. Liston was also informed that a special coach on the train is being reserved for four members from Pickaway and Fairfield counties.

Those making the tour include Dwight Bethards Scioto township, who was awarded the trip for winning the essay contest sponsored by the county granges. This essay was on the World's Poultry Congress. Others making the trip are C. E. Moore, vocational agricultural instructor from Atlanta and John Peck, George Skinner, Dan Steele, and Palmer Peck, students; Mrs. Dwight Rector, Dwight Rector, Jr., Sara Jane Rector, Francis Fraunfelder, John Spencer, and Jean Spencer of Saltcreek township; Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Schleich, Mary Alice Schleich and Helen Schleich, of Deer creek township; Irene Pontius, Hoyt Timmons and Weldon Leist, of Pickaway township; Mrs. William H. Grassele and Miriam Grassele, of Darby township; Faye and Gerald Solt of Walnut township; C. E. Dick and Glendal Dick of Monroe township, and Mrs. Herbert Swayer, of Harrison township.

Mrs. Swayer and Mrs. Rector are chaperons for the Pickaway county 4-H members.

EARLY TUB THUMPERS

BOSTON — With two rival fairs in operation, states from coast to coast are redoubling efforts to entice visitors. But this publicity drive is not new. The states had publicity men as far back as 1616. According to Governor Leverett Saltonstall, back in 1616, Captain John Smith (of Pocahontas fame) prepared maps and pamphlets on the advantages of New England and distributed them abroad. In 1621, English promotion companies engaged in crude advertising with lurid handbills to induce English people to go to America.

SOCIAL SECURITY OFFICER VISITS P. O. THURSDAY

Postmaster A. Hulse Hays will be visited by a representative of the Social Security Board on Thursday July 27, who will maintain office hours in the postoffice from 12 noon to 2 p. m.

The postmaster wishes to call the attention of the citizens of Circleville to the fact that it is the worker's opportunity to become acquainted with his rights and benefits under the Social Security program and to make application for Social Security account number at this time, particularly, since a number of new workers will be entering employment.

The postmaster announces that he has received word from Mr. C. C. Darby, Manager of the Columbus office of the Social Security Board, which serves this community, that account numbers are being issued at the rate of 150 a day to new workers going into employment. In the majority of cases, these workers are students and seasonal employees. Attention is called to the fact that the person who has an account number should always use the same account number during his working life; in this way, only one wage record is set up for each individual.

HERMAN SMITH FILES

Suit for divorce charging neglect of duty was filed in Common Pleas court Tuesday by Herman Smith against Gladys Louise Smith, both of Circleville. They were married April 29, 1935 and have one child, the petition says. Mr. Smith asks custody of the child.
